

The Limits of an Online Existence

Anthony Brooks, Future Foundation

Anthony describes the Future Foundation as an organisation of free thinkers that collaborate on interesting projects, mostly in the information technology arena. At the moment, Anthony is spending most of his time managing the Internet Service Provider's Association, but he takes time off to do real-time abstract graphics performances from time to time. His talk was very stimulating and featured future scenarios of thought control, internet implants, spray on screens and transhumanism! Imagine not having to interfile all the legal updates - just plug the lawyers in to the database and they can have their brains updated instead! The days of being able to say "Beam me up Scotty" and having it done are coming closer!